

Keynote Speakers

David Hicks is Visiting Professor at Bath Spa University and internationally recognised for his work on the need for a global and futures dimension in the curriculum. He has a particular interest in the creation of both sustainable schools and sustainable futures. His recent books are: Teaching the Global Dimension: Key Principles and Effective Practice, with Cathie Holden, Routledge (2007), and Lessons for the Future: The Missing Dimension in Education, Trafford Publishing (2006). For more information about David's work, visit his web site www.teaching4abetterworld.co.uk

Margaret Burr is Co-ordinator of the Humanities Education Centre, in Tower Hamlets, one of a network of Development Education Centres nationally which focus on the Global Dimension in the Curriculum. She has been involved in various forms of linking in schools for 20 years and she recently developed the Toolkit for Linking: opportunities and challenges for UKOWLA (UK One World Linking Association) and the coalition of international agencies, BUILD (Building Understanding through International Links for Development). Margaret is also the author of a DEA Thinkpiece on linking in which she asks: What sort of thinking goes into linking? How much thinking really does go into linking? Do we do enough thinking about linking? Do we really think before we link? The piece includes the author's stories and personal anecdotes about linking, which highlight some of the issues and potential pitfalls. She is currently co-ordinating the 'Southern Voices in linking' project funded by Oxfam which aims to identify the barriers to greater involvement by Southern partners in links.

Keynote Speakers

Prof Ted Cante CBE: In over 30 years in public service, Ted has held a wide range of senior positions at national and local level focussing, in particular, on urban regeneration and key social and economic problems. In August 2001, Ted Cante was appointed by the Home Secretary to Chair the Community Cohesion Review Team. The ensuing 'Cante Report' was produced in December 2001 and made around 70 recommendations. The concept of 'community cohesion' was subsequently adopted by the Government and Ted was asked to chair the Panel which advised Ministers on implementation. Prior to this, Ted was the Chief Executive of Nottingham City Council (1990 and 2001), Director of Housing in Leicester City Council (1988 to 1990) and Wakefield MDC (1979 to 1983), Under Secretary at the AMA (1983 to 1988) and had also worked for Manchester City Council. He is now Professor at the Institute of Community Cohesion (iCoCo). Ted joined the IDeA in 2000 and is now an Associate Director. His book Community Cohesion: A New Framework for Race and Diversity, was published by Palgrave Macmillan (updated edition 2008). He was awarded the CBE in 2004.

Keynote Speakers

David Hicks is Visiting Professor at Bath Spa University and internationally recognised for his work on the need for a global and futures dimension in the curriculum. He has a particular interest in the creation of both sustainable schools and sustainable futures. His recent books are: Teaching the Global Dimension: Key Principles and Effective Practice, with Cathie Holden, Routledge (2007), and Lessons for the Future: The Missing Dimension in Education, Trafford Publishing (2006). For more information about David's work, visit his web site www.teaching4abetterworld.co.uk

Margaret Burr is Co-ordinator of the Humanities Education Centre, in Tower Hamlets, one of a network of Development Education Centres nationally which focus on the Global Dimension in the Curriculum. She has been involved in various forms of linking in schools for 20 years and she recently developed the Toolkit for Linking: opportunities and challenges for UKOWLA (UK One World Linking Association) and the coalition of international agencies, BUILD (Building Understanding through International Links for Development). Margaret is also the author of a DEA Thinkpiece on linking in which she asks: What sort of thinking goes into linking? How much thinking really does go into linking? Do we do enough thinking about linking? Do we really think before we link? The piece includes the author's stories and personal anecdotes about linking, which highlight some of the issues and potential pitfalls. She is currently co-ordinating the 'Southern Voices in linking' project funded by Oxfam which aims to identify the barriers to greater involvement by Southern partners in links.

Keynote Speakers

Prof Ted Cante CBE: In over 30 years in public service, Ted has held a wide range of senior positions at national and local level focussing, in particular, on urban regeneration and key social and economic problems. In August 2001, Ted Cante was appointed by the Home Secretary to Chair the Community Cohesion Review Team. The ensuing 'Cante Report' was produced in December 2001 and made around 70 recommendations. The concept of 'community cohesion' was subsequently adopted by the Government and Ted was asked to chair the Panel which advised Ministers on implementation. Prior to this, Ted was the Chief Executive of Nottingham City Council (1990 and 2001), Director of Housing in Leicester City Council (1988 to 1990) and Wakefield MDC (1979 to 1983), Under Secretary at the AMA (1983 to 1988) and had also worked for Manchester City Council. He is now Professor at the Institute of Community Cohesion (iCoCo). Ted joined the IDeA in 2000 and is now an Associate Director. His book Community Cohesion: A New Framework for Race and Diversity, was published by Palgrave Macmillan (updated edition 2008). He was awarded the CBE in 2004.